Abstract

The invention is a communication management module for effectively controlling an optical interface that uses a control panel indicator in an appliance for communication. The module includes a physical, framing, transport, dispatch, and application layers. The module is implemented to verify the integrity of data frames and to correlate data frames and responses with applications in the application layer.